Advisement

Academic advisers are a crucial part of the student services provided in the School of Continuing and Professional Studies. The advisers serve as a basic source of information about the degree requirements, policies, and procedures of your division. They are able to help you resolve academic problems and make informed educational choices. Every undergraduate student meets with his or her adviser at least once each term, although students are permitted to meet with advisers as often as needed. Each semester, each undergraduate student must complete a registration agreement with an adviser, indicating the courses for which they will register the next semester. (Graduate students are strongly encouraged to meet with your advisor each term.) After the registration agreement has been approved by an adviser, students are required to begin the registration process by logging into NYUHome and clicking ALBERT.
